Project benefits:

FPI brings with it many benefits that include capacity building in agriculture, marketing of your products on international markets, business networking and marketing, cooperative working relationships, advocacy for special interests and problems, educational programs, and more that include:

- 1) Joining self-help microfinance schemes for sustainable agriculture.
- 2) Joining community agriculture activities that promote the success of transformative agriculture for climate resilience and mitigation
- 3) Benefiting from agroecology skills and knowledge transfer activities
- 4) Getting training on how to start or joining cluster farming development projects.
- 5) Setting up of incubation hubs for agricultural technological innovations

The project is implemented to achieve FPI project goals

The Agriculture project aims to develop FPI country chapters, organizational structures for producers that represent their needs and interests; improve the institutional capacity and quality of agricultural services delivered by public and private institutions and producer organizations, and improve the flow of information for all stakeholders.

The project consists of the following components:

- 1) Support capacity building for producers organizations (both local and international) and inter-professional organizations to improve market access and provide, manage, and finance services to their members.
- 2) Support public, cooperative, and private services that deliver producer services focused on increasing quality, value-added, and market access.
- 3) Support public, cooperative, and private services that deliver producer services to livestock producers, with a particular focus on improving the quality of services and their sustainability through progressive transfer and cost recovery.
- 4) Protecting producers from plant diseases and predators, and at protecting consumers from pesticide residues, and thereby increasing the value and market access of produce.
- 5) The project will maximize the coverage, reliability, and availability of statistics and information for all parties making choices affecting the sector. It will also support project management. For more visit our website: <https://www.farmersprideinternational.org/>
